A Manual for the Use of Students in Egyptology. By Edward Yorke McCauley, U. S. N.

(Read before the American Philosophical Society, July, 1881.)

Preface

In the following "Manual", compiled from the authorities within my reach, will be found much information which, after the first elementary knowledge has been acquired, is essential to progress in the study of Egyptology

No attempt, that I am aware of, has been hitherto made to bring together within the compass of one volume, and in its present fullness, the results of the learned labors of Egyptologists eminent in this department. To obtain these results, requires an extensive and expensive library and many days of patient labor and research.

In a department of knowledge where our metes and bounds are constantly widening it would be presumptuous to assume that the lists, I have given, of Gods, of symbols, Names of Countries &c comprise all that are known or that may be found in hieroglyphic texts: Those, in fact, alone are given which are of daily occurrence.

The student will observe, in my List of Ideographs, that, not content with giving the main idea only, of which any single example is the exponent, as is generally the case, I give a list of the terms which start from the Parent ideograph; By this amplification, which is far from complete, a conception may be formed of the general value or tenor of the ideograph.

It must be borne in mind that I have not undertaken to give any general outline of Hieroglyphics during the thousands of years covered by Egyptian history, in which, what may have been correct at one period may be changed at another; Wherefore, although errors undoubtedly occur in the following pages (Errare est, re), haste in imputing them is to be deprecated.

It gives me pleasure to acknowledge the constant aid and encouragement which I have received from Dr. P. Lesley L.L.D. and also the untiring courtesy extended to me by Mr. Lloyd P. Smith and his assistant Mr. B. Samuel at the Ridgeway Library.
